Swell Time In Town

This piece has to do with East Coast vs West Coast. The idea came from my wife who has lived in both LA and New York City. She would always mention the difference in the pace between the two cities. New York is fast paced, people always on the go, running from one place to the next with a hotdog in their hand. They are movers and shakers and things get done. I always admired the work ethics of New Yorkers. Los Angeles, on the hand, is much more kickback and relaxed. Things get done at it's own pace, people are less stressed and with all the traffic, you wonder if anyone ever works. I always thought how great it would be to bring a little California to New York and a little New York to California. I have a great admiration for both cities and decided to put my vision into my photography.
