“In Her Course”

This piece spans three continents: Europe, Asia and America. The odd tree trunk with the tunnel in it was taken in Thailand, whereas, the river was shot from a castle in Aigues-Mortes located in the South of France and finished with the statue of Liberty at the entrance of New York. The immigrants would go around it when they arrived in the United States by sea and stopped at Ellis Island to clear customs. I found it more amusing to have boats go right through it and ironically, through a “tunnel” underneath the great symbol that the statue represents.
